Introductory Note

Rural Development: A Select Bibliography is compiled from materials selected from the computerized ESCAP Bibliographic Information System (EBIS) data base. The bibliography comprises monographs, documents and serial articles received in the ESCAP Library and the United Nations libraries of some other United Nations agencies during 1989.

The contents are arranged under seven broad subjects widely used among rural development staff and researchers, namely: agriculture; application of science and technology; health and social services; human resources development and institutions; industrial development; physical infrastructure, natural resources and environment; and policies and planning.

The bibliographic information given is the same as in previous issues. Author, title and area indexes appear after the bibliography. The area index covers Asia, Australia, Bangladesh, Bhutan, China, Developing countries, East Asia, Fiji, India, Indonesia, Japan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Malaysia, Maldives, Middle East, Myanmar, Nepal, Pacific Region, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, Republic of Korea, Solomon Islands, South Asia, South East Asia, Sri Lanka, Thailand.

Please note that the ESCAP Library cannot provide hard copy but requests for searches, compilation of bibliographic information from the data base and photocopying services (for journal articles only) may be made in writing to:

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT/ INDUSTRIAL POLICY/ DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMMES/ INDIA

The policies and programmes aimed at rural industrialization yielded positive results in terms of increased outputs, productive employment and thereby improved incomes of rural artisans and other weaker sections of rural households engaged in these industries. Yet, productive capacities of workers in a good number of industrial activities continued to be very low. Rural industrial categories need development of new skills, upgradation of traditional techniques of production and institutional support.
