INTRODUCTION

In its resolution 3022 (XXVII) on channels of communication with youth and international youth organizations, the United Nations General Assembly, inter alia, requested all United Nations agencies, including the regional economic commissions, to prepare systematic programmes and series of projects to increase the involvement of youth in national development.

In compliance with this resolution, the Secretary-General of the United Nations convened an Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Youth in New York in 1973. The Group recommended, inter alia, that the regional economic commissions should produce, as a measure of exchange of information, regional inventories of youth organizations engaged in development as well as governmental structures that work with youth.

In this connexion, ESCAP, in 1976, published a Regional Inventory of Governmental and Non-governmental Agencies Working for Youth Development.

This current publication is an updated edition, published in collaboration with United Nations Office at Geneva. Although this revised inventory is only as comprehensive as the information and responses provided us by member countries allow, it is hoped that it will facilitate a greater exchange of information on youth projects and programmes among the member countries of ESCAP.

The secretariat expresses its gratitude to the governmental and non-governmental agencies for their co-operation, assistance and contributions to the publication of the present directory.
